It is no exaggeration, but the most sober truth, to say that but for the women of Britain and their work, Germany would by now have won the war. For had they failed to rise to the unprecedented demands which their country has made upon them, Britain's industrial effort would have collapsed, and her armies in the field would have been paralyzed. Some three million men have been withdrawn from British industry to serve with the colours; 25 per cent, of the male labour employed in the chemical and engineering trades has been drafted into the army; the normal staffs of offices, factories, railways and munition shops have been stripped to the bone at the imperious call of war. Had the women of Britain been unable or unwilling to step into the vacant places, the war, first lost in the workshop, would have been finally lost in the field. But the women of Britain have not failed. Rather, they have taken up their unlooked-for task with an energy, an enthusiasm and an efficiency which have been one...
