Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Wheeler's Graded Arithmetics The leading courses in arithmetic for the Seventh and Eighth grades apply elementary principles to actual business problems, and they recommend that good teaching shall combine a certain amount of general information with a good working knowledge of business forms. In recent years these courses have recognized the necessity for coordinating practical arithmetic with the problems of home economics, while manual training, domestic science, and agriculture have been included as imperative essentials. Manifestly, therefore, a well-planned text designed for the last two years of the elementary schools must meet all of the older requirements, and, at the same time, provide adequate material for the broadening influences that seek to vitalize modern teaching. The authors feel that this third book of the series meets both the old and the new demands. While it is true that the methods of all business and manufacturing firms develop certain details of form that are not found in school textbooks, it is also true that these details are merely variations which extend beyond the fundamentals that the school must thoroughly teach. The keen business man does not expect young boys and girls to have a knowledge of business practice; but he has the right to expect that they shall be habitually careful, systematic, and accurate. Consequently, the textbook and the teacher must unswervingly concentrate on the development of these qualities in order to render the best service for both the pupil and the future employer. This book covers a wide range of modern arithmetical applications. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at This book is a...
